

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5       The present invention relates to an apparatus, method and computer program for workload balancing in an asynchronous messaging system. The number of server instances, which process work items from a queue of messages, is controlled based upon that queue's average queue depth and one or more predetermined thresholds.